DETROIT CHAPTER 9 MEDIATION TEAM ANNOUNCED

Chief Judge Gerald Rosen today announced the members of the primary team of mediators who will work with him on the mediation of major issues in the Detroit bankruptcy, the largest such case in our nation's history. Chief Judge Rosen, who was appointed as the lead facilitative mediator by presiding Bankruptcy Judge Steven Rhodes, said, "We are very fortunate indeed that some of the leading federal judges and private mediators from Michigan and around the nation have agreed to assist Judge Rhodes and the parties in attempting to resolve the many challenging issues confronting Detroit in this case. This initial team brings a wealth of widely recognized experience and expertise to the mediation process that will provide the parties with a confidential, neutral forum to discuss their respective positions. There are literally thousands of claims and issues in the case, and the team's initial work will focus on the major issues at the outset of the case. As the case develops, additional mediators may be asked to assist us with other parties and issues. I look forward to working with the mediation team and the parties in forging a facilitative process that will provide the best opportunity for the successful resolution of as many disputes as possible, so that Detroit and our region can move forward to realize their great potential." The initial meeting of the mediation team with the major parties will be held on September 17, 2013.
